

 Anthropology and the Boycott of Israeli Academic Institutions by Richard A.

Shweder by Louise S. [2016, Apr 05]

Hi Louise,

I thought this might interest you. I recently published an opinion piece with the Huffington Post titled "Targeting the Israeli Academy: Will Anthropologists Have the Courage to Just Say 'No'?". Here is the link:

<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/richard-a-shweder/targeting-the-israeli-academy-9540974.html?1458837831>

Please feel free to circulate it far and wide. Comments, including critical ones, are of course most welcome. I will be curious to see how the members of the IP network relate to this issue.

Warm regards, as ever,

Rick

 Comment by Michelle Brenner by Louise S. [2016, Apr 05]

I am with you Rick, Complexity is closer to the truth than simplicity.

kind regards Michelle

Michelle Brenner
Holistic Conflict Resolution Consultant
Reg. Family Dispute Resolving Practitioner
Phone Sydney Australia (02) 9389 2005
Email: brennermichelle@hotmail.com

 [Comment by Bond, Michael \[MM\]](#) by Louise S. [2016, Apr 05]

Such even-handed, graceful prose around a contentious issue – the very example of reasoned academic discourse from Rick Shweder. “partisan identity politics” has met its match!

In appreciation,

michael

 Comment by Lutz Eckensberger by Louise S. [2016, Apr 05]

Dear Rick,

I am just reading your (old) chapter on "the romantic rebellion.." It is like most of your stuff a brilliant work. Thank you for it. I am asked to write (another) piece on Boesch's theory. Since I was rather close to him my writings were always constructive, but I was never satisfied. The reason is probably that he himself was ambivalent with his point of view. He most probably falls into the category of being a romantic writer. But he also wanted to be a scientist. Anyway, you helped me a lot.

Warm regards

Lutz Eckensberger

lutzeckensberger@googlemail.com