

Hu, Linying

Doctoral student in Anthropology
Department of Sociology and Anthropology
Simon Fraser University
Email: linyingh@sfu.ca

Bio:

Areas of Study: Psychiatric and psychological anthropology, gender and family, vulnerability, and ethics in China.

Linying entered the PhD program in Anthropology at SFU in fall 2017. She holds an MA degree in Education from Shandong Normal University and a PhD in Ethics from Renmin University of China. She had been teaching ethics and bioethics in Peking University Health Science Centre during 2003-2015. She has joined the programs of public health ethics and research ethics in Harvard School of Public Health in 2004 and 2010. She has been deeply involved in policy advocacy in fields of organ transplantation, mental health and medical professionalism in China. In her doctoral research, she engages the emotional, moral and cultural crisis and conflicts along the gender line through investigating current discourses on postpartum depression in contemporary China.